The InT Lab – ROV

Our oceans, vast and diverse, hold significant potential for growth and innovation, yet are increasingly threatened by marine debris. Marine debris is an environmental, economic, human health and aesthetic problem. From densely populated regions to remote areas far from obvious sources and human contact, our ocean has become a dumping ground for rubbish. Everyday items like plastic bags and food wrappers, larger items like car batteries and fishing nets, our debris is entering the sea at an alarming rate. This debris not only affects marine life, but also takes a significant toll on people and coastal communities around the world.

In an effort to combat this global issue, AISL Outdoor, in collaboration with the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers (IEEE), a global authority in engineering, computing, and technology, is launching our first-ever ROV Winter Camp.

Dive into the World of ROVs

An ROV, or Remotely Operated Underwater Vehicle, is a tethered underwater mobile device often referred to as an underwater robot. These devices are designed to be controlled from the surface and are equipped with specialised tools to perform tasks which could be hazardous or impossible for divers to execute.

Our programme introduces the fundamentals of ROV technology, progresses through a Mini ROV workshop, culminates in a Basic ROV Build, and ends with a thrilling under-water challenge. This comprehensive approach ensures students master the knowledge and skills required to assemble and operate an ROV.

Mini-ROV Workshop

Starting with a Mini-ROV, a perfect starting point for anyone interested in underwater robotics, students will learn the basics required for advanced designs. The unit comes in a kit, with two different assembly options depending on the student's age and abilities:

1. Control and motor blocks assembled: The student assembles the ROV, the control box casing and connects the umbilical wires.
2. Complete kit: The student solders the control circuit and motor block, then assembles the control box and the ROV.

This hands-on approach ensures that every student assembles their own ROV, gaining a comprehensive understanding of the basics.

Basic ROV Workshop

Embodying true STEM practices and objectives, this workshop goes beyond basic kit assembly. Students are given a set of plans and a box of materials, from which they build their selected ROV model from scratch. This encourages the development of problem-solving skills and sparks creativity.

Student pilots then test their ROVs in a pool, either a school swimming pool or a portable pool set up specifically for the purpose. Tasks and missions add to the testing experience, encouraging teams to master the functionality and see their ROVs in action.

Key Highlight - Final Challenge: The Marine Debris Showdown

The grand finale of our ROV winter camp is the Marine Debris Showdown — an exhilarating challenge set in our own school pool, transformed into a simulated oceanic arena. This is where the ROV meets genuine underwater challenges.

Each piece of simulated debris, ranging from drinks cans and plastic bags to discarded ropes, represents a real-world threat to our marine environment. The task is to manoeuvre the student-built ROVs through the pool to collect as much debris as possible, testing the precision, functionality and resilience of these underwater robots.

This isn't a simple exercise; it's a pulse-pounding race against the clock, a test of strategy and a trial of innovative problem-solving. Every successful collection signifies a small victory in our ongoing battle against ocean pollution and a testament to the power of technology in environmental conservation.

Our pool will test the ROVs to their limit, with their carefully crafted arms or fixed tools, lights to illuminate the depths, and cameras to navigate the underwater terrain. The teams will need to strategise, adapt and work together, turning their theoretical knowledge into practical solutions under pressure.

This final challenge is not just about winning. It's an opportunity for our students to experience first-hand the complexities and rewards of environmental conservation. It's a step towards understanding that technology and innovation can go hand in hand with preserving our precious marine ecosystems.

Certification and Beyond

All students participating in an ROV workshop will receive an IEEE Certificate of Participation, recognizing their achievement in an IEEE ROV building workshop. These workshops meet specific goals and targets, earning certification by the HK IEEE CT/OES, which can be beneficial for students' further studies.

Upon camp completion, interested students have the opportunity to join various ROV competitions, bolstering their experience and providing reinforcement for future educational pursuits.

About the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers (IEEE)

The IEEE and its members inspire a global community to innovate for a better tomorrow through its more than 400,000 members in more than 160 countries, and its highly cited publications, conferences, technology standards and professional and educational activities.

They are the trusted "voice" for engineering, computing and technology information around the globe. This includes setting the standards for the way technology is taught in schools and universities. It is therefore fitting that they take the lead in showing the future of this type of education, particularly STEM learning.

IEEE recognises the effort youngsters put into our workshops and other arranged activities with formal IEEE certification. Competition and conference platforms are also provided for students to further their work and recognition.

Little Lions Explorer – Character Camp

We believe that the greatest leaders aren't merely intelligent, but also possess strong character and values. This is why our Little Lions Explorer – Character Camp focuses on character building as the cornerstone in nurturing the leaders of tomorrow.

We understand the pivotal role character education plays in children's holistic development, setting the foundation for their success in life. Our camp is designed to nurture core values such as uniqueness, respect, teamwork and empathy, essential attributes for building positive relationships and navigating life's complexities. We aim to equip our little explorers with the social and emotional skills that foster academic achievement and resilience, cultivating a generation of responsible and compassionate individuals.

Our immersive 5-day programme, conducted entirely in English, deep-dives into themes of Feelings, Virtues, Fables, Role Models and Character through Science. Each day, students will explore three character-focused themes, engaging in a vibrant blend of activities that include storytelling, arts & crafts, role-playing and scavenger hunts. These activities are designed not only to educate but also to inspire, fostering an environment where learning is fun, and character development is an exciting journey of discovery.

Day 1: Feelings

By learning about feelings, students deepen their understanding of themselves and enhance their interpersonal skills. Students learn to build their 'emotional dictionary' and the different strategies to deal with these feelings - to stop, think and go to do the right thing. The objective is for students to identify, articulate and express their feelings to others, while also learning to empathise and relate to others.

Day 2: Virtues

Be an adventurous explorer and grow in character virtues such as patience, tenacity and self-control. Children set out on a safari camp to explore animals of good character and how they can apply their character virtues in their daily lives.

Day 3: Fables

There is power in storytelling. Children are introduced to fables and learn character through some of the classics. Fables such as 'Lion and Mouse', 'Bundle of Sticks' and 'The Boy Who Cried Wolf' have been re-written and are used to highlight values like friendship, teamwork and honesty.

Day 4: Role-Models

Positive role models inspire and encourage the building of character. Students learn about the life stories of historical and modern role models. Character values, such as humble leadership, persistence, perseverance and compassion, will be highlighted through the role models in the series.

Day 5: Character Through Science

Using hands-on STEM experiments as analogies, students learn about important life lessons such as how to manage anger rather than behaving like an erupting volcano, find friends and mix like a rainbow, and have resilience to 'float' above difficult situations.
